General Price Guide

The ultimate determinant of our product price range is the specifications and materials used to execute the project. Materials vary in terms of quality, durability, and country of origin as well as price. The finish of the product is another variable in our pricing, hence painted surfaces are oftentimes more expensive than ready-made materials that do not require the extra manufacturing processes.

Painting a solid wood project requires more labor and extensive work; it takes three times longer to manufacture than other projects that involve merely shaping wood. The simpler the process, the more affordable the project will be.

Modern living spaces have become increasingly trendy and a current trend in the interior design space. There are multiple factors that promote this, one of these is that the materials used in these projects are laminate / melamine boards made from compressed chipboard or MDF which are cheaper than solid wood.

Contemporary projects have a solid wood frame and are a combination of laminate wood and painted wood. They are slightly more expensive but you have a remarkable finish.

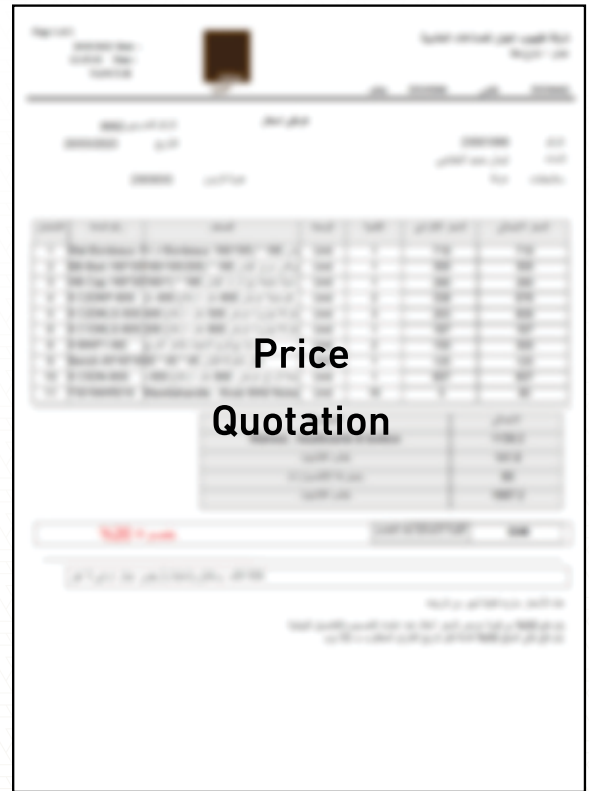

Classic style is the most luxurious type of project that is completed in the woodworking industry. Typically there is a lot of hand carving involved and the assembly of the wood panels is a lengthy manufacturing process. Materials here are the most expensive since solid woods are typically used. Classic projects are breathtaking and a big portion of our business, they are the finest line in our wood industry and production.
